Editorial.

There are blowflies on the ceiling above you, well out of reach of the swat, and the spray is locked up somewhere, and you haven't got the key, and it's hot, and humid. All the same, the flies annoy you; you try to work on and ignore them, but they refuse to be ignored. Finally you shuffle your papers together and go into the other room to work. It is the same there, and in the end you do no work at all, but sit and stare malevolently at the repulsive brown things on the ceiling.

Your head is full of particularly good ideas at the moment. Schemes for the betterment of yourself, your friends, the community, even for the future of the world astonish you with their clarity and profusion. You feel quite a strong urge to get out of the armchair and do something about it, and you search around the mind for the idea easiest to execute. You wiggle your toes a bit and tell the lounge in the next armchair you think you'll go and do some work. He says, "You're mad," but he always was lazy and unimaginative. You stretch one leg and prepare to get up, becoming aware of the extraordinary effort required to do so. Just for effect there is an accompaniment of artificial grunts and some grumbling about having to swot for the exams.

Just then an irritating itch besets you behind the right knee. To scratch it you find it much easier to sag back into the chair, and then you suddenly realise what a delightful feeling it is to fall back into a chair thus. Perfectly delicious. Reflecting that the work is not really important, and that most ideas are only impracticable, un-human dreams anyhow, you settle down to the lethargy of idle musing again, and that is the last of your ideas.

In Parliament the member for Watchful has been talking about defence again. Quite a fine speech, too, and so obviously sincere. Such a pity there was only half a house to hear him, but the press was quite complimentary, and made a minor fuss about his subject and "the vital need for planning in all matters relating to the defence of our shores". They put it on the market report page. "The fellow said something about planning for the end of the war, too, but his scheme was utterly useless; involved guaranteed jobs for the returned men, and demanded that they shouldn't be sent to farm the desert. The man's a bit of a fanatic, you know; this idea would cost an enormous amount, and naturally nobody will be in the mood for taxation after this war's all over. He's always talking about things that would never happen here, or at any rate couldn't happen for years. His schemes might be alright, I suppose, if he had party support, but there's not much chance of that since he voted with the others over that repatriation business."

"By the way, what won the 4.15? I had a fiver on Pink Pill."

The spray in the cupboard, and the blowflies that prevent work. The schemes in the armchair, and the comfort of modern furniture.

The voice in the wilderness, and the nice ideas, and the clucking sympathy, and the placation of the angry voice. And the races.

To-morrow the Military Governor of the area will review his victorious troops in the city streets. The public will assemble in the streets at 2 p.m. for the cheering, and the parade will move off from the corner of Neworder and Newasia Streets. The populace of Melbourne is warned against a repetition of the rebellious outbursts of Friday last.

EDITORS' NOTE.

On the retirement of Mr. T. Henderson from the direction of "Pegasus" at the close of first term, the control of the magazine, being an honour too fraught with troubles to be popular in the Common Room, became a serious problem.

Eventually, however, the Headmaster permitted the committee to assume full control over "Pegasus", under the joint editorship of A. F. Davies and C. M. Williams. It is to the committee, therefore, that criticisms of this edition should be addressed.

Innovations of a mild kind have been made in an effort to make "Pegasus" less of an historical record than a real magazine of interest to both present Collegians and Old Boys. The editors would appreciate fair criticisms of their endeavours, so that those who direct the magazine in the future may have the benefit of the experiences of one edition without professorial control.

No member of the school needs to be told of the enormous amount of painstaking, and often thankless work undertaken for many years by Mr. Henderson as the real "boss" of "Pegasus", and in reality every good word said about past editions has been a tribute to him. He has taught us what we should aim at in the production of a College magazine, and led us through the dull and complicated ways of school journalism until our feet were set upon an independent road. We can only hope that we have followed worthily his experienced and sage guidance. Kindly let us know what you think.

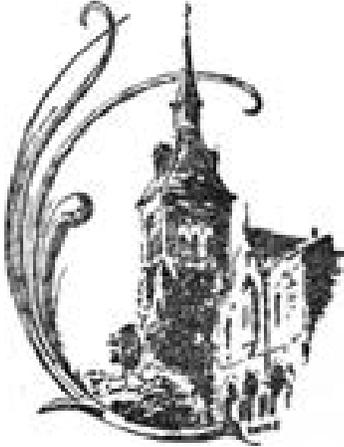

EXCHANGES.

We acknowledge with thanks the following exchanges and express regret if any have been inadvertently omitted.

The Aberdeen Grammar School Magazine, The Armadalian, "At Home", The Brighton Grammarian, The Campbellian, The Camberwell Grammarian, The Carey Chronicle, The Caulfield Grammarian, The Corian, The Cygnet, Darulaman, The Dookie Collegian, The Hutchin's School Magazine, The Herioter, The King's School Magazine, The Launcestonian, The Melburnian, The Minervan, The Mitre, Patchwork, The Prince Alfred Chronicle, The Rafflesian, Silver and Green, The Scotch Collegian, The Southportonian, The St. Peter's College Magazine, The Waitakian, The Wesley College Chronicle, and later, B.C.S. Magazine, Lennoxville, Canada.

THE PEGASUS,

School Items.

THE annual school service was held at St. George's church on June 22; in addition to rendering several hymns and anthems, the boys participated in the service as fully as possible. The evening service was broadcast, and there was a record attendance.

Late in June Mr. Stuckey, a young missionary from Korea, lectured to several classes, and kindly helped us with the weekly discussion group.

On July 15 a number of senior boys attended an A.R.P. demonstration given by the Melbourne and Metropolitan Fire Brigade at Geelong Grammar School. They were shown how to deal with all types of incendiary bombs, and much amusement was caused when the powers of an asbestos suit were effectively demonstrated.

That evening, boys of Forms V and VI attended a lecture by Professor Hartung in the University Extension series. His subject was "Life in the Universe", and as well as giving us a remarkably clear picture of life on our planet from a biological standpoint, he considered the possibilities of other parts of the universe being inhabited.

A Y.W.C.A. rally in the Plaza Theatre was attended by many College boys. Our choir contributed considerably to the success of the evening, as will be seen from the report of the function in the Music Notes.

Amongst the Wednesday morning lectures heard since the last issue, those by Mr. Keith, on Forestry; and the Headmaster, entitled "Russia, Our New Ally" were outstanding.

In the first week of July, College drawing classes inspected an exhibition of contemporary art which was on show in Geelong. A very interesting exhibition of models, amongst which were many made by members of the House of Guilds, was also visited by numbers of boys.

The second term exeat week-end was taken from the fourth Friday in July until the following Monday. Some of the boarders who stayed at the school during the exeat were guests at a fancy dress ball at the Hermitage.

Melbourne and Geelong were completely blacked out one night late in September. Great excitement was caused throughout the school, and the Senior House studied in a room specially blacked out, while the rest of the school went to bed early.

Representatives of the Free French movement gave an interesting illustrated lecture in the Morrison Hall on the night of October 10.

During the year we noticed that we had acquired a new Head Groundsman, Mr. Hobbs, and "Ted" Rankin must now be sought in the garden of the Head's house.

After a morning devoted to the coaching of the Glee Club, Mr. Bernard Manning, the school's favourite Gilbert and Sullivan player, again treated the entire school to a lecture, enlivened with songs from his extensive repertoire, on the afternoon of October 13. He spoke to us on the history of the famous collaboration which produced the series of Savoy Operas, and, amongst other enjoyable items, gave us a fearsome taste of the Mikado himself, as the experienced player portrays him.

On Sunday, November 16, the school attended the city service in Johnstone's Park, this being the Geelong response to Mr. Curtin's call to prayer.

During the third term there were two baseball matches against the Morongo and Hermitage teams respectively. We won the first match by a comfortable margin in a match which had a pronounced lighter side, but the Hermitage team defeated us and thus regained the Challenge Cup which has graced our Dining Hall for a year.

THE PEGASUS,

On the night of Friday, November 22, many geography students went to the Davidson Hall to hear an interesting lecture by Mr. Crosby Morrison, who dealt mainly with the Great Barrier Reef.

On the afternoon of Thursday, November 27, Mr. Fallaw addressed a meeting in the Morrison Hall of boys who will not be returning to College next year. His subject was the affiliation of Old Boys with the Old Geelong Collegians' Association, of which he is the Honorary Secretary. As a result of this meeting many of those present were enrolled as members of the O.G.C.A. for the coming year.

The influenza epidemic which threatened to ruin "The Mikado" raged for a considerable time after the production was finished, and numbers of boys were confined to the hospital until late in the term.

We welcomed Miss Lyall at the beginning of this term as housekeeper. She took the place of Miss Currie who left during the second term holidays.

A. F. Davies and W. R. Dickson were successful in winning Minor Resident Scholarships to Ormond College for the year 1942.

The Boarders' Farewell Banquet.

THIS year's Farewell Banquet was held on the night of Speech Day in the Dining Hall, and Mr. H. Fallaw, Honorary Secretary of the Old Collegians' Association, was the guest of honour.

Several of the speeches were especially good, and the general standard of speaking was high. The food, too, was excellent, and, although the toast list was unusually long, it was a most enjoyable evening which was brought to an end by the hearty singing of Auld Lang Syne.

Speech Day.

THE weather was perfect for the annual speech day which was held on the Headmaster's lawns on the afternoon of November 28. Mr. J. D. G. Medley, M.A., Vice Chancellor of the University of Melbourne, was the visiting speaker, and delivered an address full of humour and wisdom. An interesting innovation was the inclusion of three speeches dealing with special activities within the school, given in the case of Science by Mr. T. Henderson, and for the Musical and House of Guilds activities by D. L. T. Woolley and C. M. Williams respectively.

The Headmaster's address, which he did not deliver in full, is printed in its entirety below.

There is a good deal of thought being given to the nature of the civilisation that will succeed this most ruinous of all wars. A school-master has to have long sight if he is to foresee the environment in which his boys will live the most influential years of their lives. I seem for a long time to have been saying that it would be world conditions rather than local conditions that would most profoundly affect our lives and the future of our boys.

Now that most of what We feared has befallen us, our first thought must be victory and the best way to secure it. But our minds cannot help looking towards the post war world. Will it be a world in which our system of finance lies in ruins, in which chaos defies order, and bare life is difficult to maintain? No one knows, but even if it be an uncharted sea on which we have to sail we children of the Elizabethans need not fear for that—Drake did not worry much about charts. All the more thrilling to those valiant navigators if their keels were pioneers.

On the other hand the changes that come may be less than we anticipate and we have something in our British tradition which we must never allow to perish whatever be our environment. The duty of the schoolmaster is not only to imagine, it is also to remember, to look back and see where in his country's history has been shame and where splendour, and to pass on if he can to the next generation the spiritual treasure that at a cost has been won and at whatever cost must be retained. This higher patriotism does not bring us into conflict with other free nations; but it will never cease to be at war with despotisms based on lies and spies, and with no higher ideal than that of a slave owner with a lash.

I believe it is our destiny once again to rule the world. We cannot imagine any possible truce with Nazism. It is conquer or be conquered. Nor is it likely that another League of Nations will spring up immediately after this war. For some months or years the victor nation must maintain the peace that it has created by its victory. We can agree with Germany that the world does need a greater degree of unity. Applied science and division of labour may raise our living standards, but they make nations more dependent on each other. For all countries but for small countries especially, a certain amount of uninterrupted exchange of goods may be a matter of life or death. If a Pax Germanica, a stagnant peace forced upon us by a German victory, is an intolerable thought, we must look clearly at the idea of a Pax Britannia, a world controlled by the Anglo-Saxon race and its allies. Are we equal to that post war task? When we compare Germany's treatment of Holland with Britain's treatment of Southern Ireland we can easily judge which of these two antagonists could be the more fully trusted with titanic responsibility. We belong to a race whose best traditions so far from being thrown aside, must be applied more widely both to the healing of the wounds in our own social order, and to those in the world at large. Let me take for brevity's sake only one side of British life—the seaman's, and consider the British sea tradition.

I was talking of this to the boarders the other day and quoted from a little book lent me by a member of the Council the story of the sinking of the "Arandora Star", a ship full of German and Italian prisoners of war. The prisoners went mad with panic and the captain instead of expressing the contempt he might have felt for their cowardice, handed his life-belt to an Italian, and by saving another threw away his own chance of life. He had a sense of responsibility for every one in his charge, even his nation's enemies. I feel that the men of his race can be trusted to give fair treatment to foreign nations if, as seems probable, our ships and planes have for some years to police the world.

I can imagine no new order that is animated by a higher spirit than shines from that last sublime gesture of a simple English master mariner. The same magnanimity breathes through the entry in Nelson's diary made as his fleet bore down upon the French at Trafalgar.

"May the great God, whom I worship, grant to my country and for the benefit of Europe in general, a great and glorious victory; and may no misconduct in anyone tarnish it; and may humanity after victory be the predominant feature in the British Fleet."

The voice of Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, the leader of German religion, sounds strangely out of tune with this. "The German religious movement" he says, "will have to declare that the love of our fellow men must be subordinated to the national honour."

Humanity after victory can be expected from only one side in this war. But it will not be the sentimental humanity which would still leave it in the power of any one people to begin another wholesale butchery of its own and other nation's youth.

To keep to the sea for our illustrations of the British spirit it is probable that most Germans laughed at the quixotism of Lieutenant Bickford. He was, you remember, the Commander of the submarine which had the "Bremen", Germany's most famous passenger ship, within easy range. He refused to fire the torpedo because that would have been contrary to international law. He received no rebuke from our naval authorities who took his action for granted. We belong to a wide Empire and we have to take long views. What a reminder to all nations that here is one race at least that will not use power lawlessly or unmercifully. Perhaps a few thoughtful Germans laughed not at all remembering the "Lusitania". This great sea tradition is not confined to specially chosen heroes. It is a general tradition, "the women and children first", "the Captain, the last to leave the ship", the boat's crew launched in stormy seas in the chance of rescuing a man overboard. It stretches, this quiet custom of self sacrifice, from the flagship of a battle fleet to the life boat on the coast.

Here is a conversation between a young member of a life boat crew and its old coxswain. "Are we goin' to launch her in this storm?"

"Yes."

"But we'll never get back!"

"Man we've got to go out, but we haven't got to come back!"

It makes no difference to our lifeboat crews whether the ships in distress are British or foreign. These expressions of humanity, of something deeper than life and broader than patriotism, are, I believe, the pillars on which alone a new world order can be built, they are Christianity in action.

One hesitates to contrast this spirit with Nazi "frightfulness". They are too remote from each other even to be contrasted. We must admit that we as a nation and as individuals often fall short of this high level of brotherly love. But at least we admire it when we see it. We do not despise it as weakness. We do not teach its opposite as a part of a manly character. When for a century we ruled the seas no nation felt that our powerful navy was a threat to trade or to peace.

If we live up to our magnificent traditions, we can bear responsibilities vaster than have ever been laid upon us before. We shall have to organise the world at first by compulsion, but our aim will be organisation by consent as soon as that is possible. The Pax Germanica has as its first and final aim unification by compulsion of the most brutal kind.

It is our duty to save our own land and our Empire, but it is our duty to save more than that. I cannot but feel that with all our defects we still have as a people a Christian tradition which, when the war is won can take us on to greater victories. The war to end war can be won only in the soul of man.

In the same book from which I have quoted, there is given the words of an epitaph written during the last war.

"In loving memory of our dear brother Richard who went to the war in the cause of peace, and died fighting, without hate, that love might live."

We who have been called upon to save the world's liberties are called upon also to save the world's brotherhood. We must not through craven fears of being great shrink from the leadership of the nations, when the war is won. But it is not won yet. So I must conclude by coming back to the present. It is not only a human foe that we fight, it is a moral corruption, a mental disease that threatens humanity.

Our Empire has survived up to this moment, but the final crisis of the fever has not yet come. A patient's life often depends upon his will to live. Britain's will to live astounded America. It was the one thing of which we who know Britain felt we could be sure.

Our Old Collegians have proved in a magnificent fashion that they also are determined that the British Empire will not fall because of any lack of resistance to this disease. But there are two things, the result largely of Geography, that many of us Australians are allowing to lower our power of resistance. These are ignorant isolationism and selfish individualism. You know the tragically silly voices of these two unconscious fifth columnists.

"Let England fight her own battles."

"I'd be just as well off under Hitler."

"This is a free country, no one will make me give up a good job to enlist."

There are still too many Australian minds that believe that liberty consists in doing only what one likes. Liberty, we know, consists in being- free to do what is right. The British tradition respects conscientious opinion.

There is a true story of a conscientious objector who, when after careful investigation his request for exemption was granted, exclaimed, "Well, this is a country worth fighting for". However conscientious objectors are few. Unconscientious objectors are many. But England expects that every man this day will do his duty and the time is approaching in Australia when the community will demand from the Government that every one will be told what his or her duty is.

That is just what the Chairman of our Council said about two years ago when in a memorable speech in the Town Hall of Melbourne he made that city for the first time face the facts. One of the necessities of community life is that we cannot be left to the freedom of our own will. We may not sacrifice our consciences to the State, but the State cannot leave us complete freedom of action. Each citizen is not allowed to make special laws for himself, to decide whether it is right or wrong to steal, or to stand by and be an accessory to a murder. In our hatred of Nazi State-worship we need not go to the other extreme and think the community must give us everything- while we give it nothing-. We may have to surrender more of our liberties for a time in order that we may not lose them all for ever. Some families have made such complete sacrifices; others of us feel we have as yet done almost nothing-. If the need arises, and many think it has arisen long- since, for complete national effort, let us hope for the sake of things more precious than life that our Government will demand

"By order sharp and swift,
 What should have been a gift."

To thousands of men and women it would be a definite relief if some competent authority could tell them in what way and in what place they and their money would be of most service. Many mistakes might be made, but what would they be compared to the mistakes being made at present, and what would a thousand individual mistakes amount to compared to the one mistake of losing a war we could have won, and an Australia we could have kept.

The sooner • stern imperative falls on willing- or unwilling ears, the sooner shall Australia's will to live restore her to full vigour and full service, and the sooner shall come the hour when we can lift up grateful hearts and say

"I saw the powers of darkness put to flight,
 I saw the morning- break."

The "At Home".

BY way of celebration of the College's 80th Birthday the school was At Home to the people of Geelong and district on the afternoon of Wednesday, October 22. Not as large a crowd as attended the last function of this kind was present this year, but a constant stream of visitors saw the various activities on show throughout the afternoon, and, considering the restrictive influence of petrol rationing, and the newly announced budget, the attendance was most satisfactory.

A notable feature of the day was the complete absence of masters, for, as far as possible, the entire show was both organised and conducted by the boys themselves, under the leadership of a general committee and several sub-committees. At the House of Guilds, several new activities were seen, and visitors expressed astonishment at the variety and quality of the work being done there. The Art Display, too, received a great deal of attention and favourable comment, even from boys of the school, many of whom were not aware of the scope of this important aspect of school activity.

Mr. Simpson had trained four teams of gymnasts to stage a display of Physical Education on the Senior Oval, and, although they did not all receive as much attention as they deserved, their work was interesting and novel.

Exhibits which were of interest to almost all the visitors were the show of science activities seen in the Physics Lecture Room and the Physics Laboratory, where complicated and often improvised equipment gave a number of curious, and sometimes unexpected effects.

There was a continuous pilgrimage to the House of Music, where the Carnegie Set was playing, and where visitors were shown the record library and filing system, while the full extent of the College musical activities was explained to them. Numbers of tickets for the impending performances of "The Mikado" were sold to the visitors during the day.

Mackie House was open for inspection, as was Junior House, the guides in each house being boarders for whom this was home for the greater part of each year. Boys of Junior House were also responsible for bringing each visitor from the entrance gate to the reception place on the Headmaster's lawns, and for explaining the many outstanding features of the Dining Hall.

The only charge made throughout the entire afternoon was 1/- for afternoon tea, which was served in a large marquee erected between the refectory block and the hospital, and, as a result, a handy sum was given to the Geelong branch of the Red Cross.

It was originally intended to have on display modern war weapons and radio signalling equipment, but at the last moment these were not available, and the cadet display took the form of demonstrations of bayonet training and of some signal work on the junior oval.

THE CONCERT IN THE EVENING.

In the evening a concert was presented in the Morrison Hall to a packed house, which was highly appreciative of the ambitious items which formed a large part of the programme. The programme was as follows:—Stringed Orchestra—Sonatine (Pleyell), Minuet (Handel); Cornet Trio I. Reid, D. Rolland, D. Drury—Whispering Hope (Hawthorne) ; Prep. Choir—Heather Rose (Schubert), Where-e'er you walk (Handel); Piano Solo G. Harding—Sonatine 1st Movement (Ravel), Scherzo from Sonata in D. Op. 28 (Beethoven); Prep. Percussion Band—Surprise Symphony, 1st Movement (Hadyn); Senior Stringed Orchestra—Huntsmen's Chorus (Weber), Shepherd's Dance (German); Vocal Solo M. I. Souter—Star of Eve (Wagner), Wide spread his name (Handel); Piano Solo, G. A. Harding—Sonata Op. 14 No. 2, 2nd Movement (Beethoven); Male Choir—Twilight (Koschat), Comrades in Arms (Adam), Sleep My Princess (Mozart); Violin Solo K. Burns—Sonata for Violin and Piano Op. 24, 1st Movement (Beethoven); School Choir—The Heavens are telling (Hadyn), Hallelujah Chorus (Handel).

Debating Notes.

ALTHOUGH only five senior meetings were held during second term, because of members' pre-occupation with social obligations, attendances were fairly satisfactory, and in the Junior and Mackie House divisions of the society both the quality and quantity of the debating done were most encouraging, and augur well for the next few years.

A notable feature of this year's inter-school debates was the fact that so many members of the Society found places in the teams which represented us so successfully against the Melbourne schools. Fifteen different members participated in these debates, all of which were won, with the sole exception of the senior debate against Morongo.

Details and results of the season's inter-school debates are given below:—

v. M.G.S. at the College, July 4. "That State governments should be abolished". Won by the College (Williams, Ferguson, Souter and Gordon).

v. Wesley, at Wesley, July 11. "That Socialism is the only solution to post-war problems." Won by the College (Davies, Dickson, Tait).

THE PEGASUS,

v. Scotch at the College, August 8. "That Public Schools in Victoria are justifying their existence". Won by College (Davies, Walpole, Fearon and Williams).

v. Xavier at Xavier, August 1. "That the weakness of the democracies in the last generation has been an enemy of peace." Won by the College (Williams, Nail, Davey and Zimmerman).

v. Morongo Junior Team at the College, August 1. "That a rich life is a product of reading". Won by the College (Gordon, Davies R., and Buchanan).

v. Morongo Senior Team at the College. "That freedom of thought be encouraged in wartime." Won by Morongo. College team: Dickson, Tait and Flannery.

The annual banquet was as good as ever. Not only were the toasts interesting, but the food was excellent and abundant, and the active members who comprised the company were well satisfied both as debaters and eaters.

The thanks of the Society are due to house-keeper and the ever willing domestic staff whose work for us, in the form of preparations for the banquet, and the supply of suppers after school debates, amply warranted the hearty toast which the banqueters drank to them.

The toasts, and those who proposed them and responded, were as follows: "The King". "The Debating Society", proposed by Mr. F. H. Davey; response by Mr. W. R. Dickson. "Youth", proposed by Mr. J. M. Ferguson; response by Mr. Cruickshank. "Old Age", proposed by Mr. C. M. Williams; response by Mr. M. I. Souter. "The Common Man", proposed by Mr. R. J. Davies; response by Mr. K. McLean. "The Stars and Stripes", proposed by Mr. A. F. Davies; response by Mr. F. G. Tait. "The Union Jack", proposed by Mr. R. H. Zimmerman; response by Mr. K. S. Nail.

The successful leader of two inter-school debates, and a keen and able member of the Society, A. F. Davies was awarded the S. B. Hamilton Calvert Memorial Prize this year, and the Headmaster's prize for the most improved speaker went to F. H. Davey, who also played his part in the success of the competitive debating, and showed marked improvement throughout the term. R. J. Davies and G. H. Hardie won the Junior and Junior House prizes respectively.

Messrs. McLean and Carrington, whose active support and encouragement in Junior and Mackie House respectively has been so valuable to the Society, are deserving of our sincere thanks, while to Mr. Henderson and Mr. Ipsen, both of whom always spend a great deal of time on the Debating Society, we again owe special thanks. Mr. Henderson, particularly, devoted Saturday evenings and much other leisure time to take the chair at the Senior House meetings, and was, as he has been for some years now, an urging and consolidating influence throughout the season.

The Debating Society also thanks Messrs. Munro, Ingpen and Montgomery, who acted as adjudicators for the debates.

It is cheering to note, in closing, that the financial position of the Society is as healthy as are its activities, and that our modest bank balance was slightly augmented at the close of this year's debating.

Music.

WITH the growth of Musical Education in our schools, and with everyone vitally concerned in its development, we are ever conscious of one movement, which we choose to label, "Musical Appreciation"—a movement which leads to a love and understanding of good music. The only appreciation work worth while is that which gives some understanding of the style and characteristics of the great composers, which tells something of a symphony, a string quartet or a madrigal, which awakens us to conscious thought of the wonderful colours which go to make up an orchestral score. It is this work that makes the truly appreciative listener; one whom, when asked to choose between music which requires a certain degree of concentration and knowledge before its full significance can be grasped, and music which is trivial, merely satisfying the fancy of the moment, making no demands on the listener, would choose the former, not because of any superior attitude but because of its greater and more lasting pleasure.

This very desirable attitude is developed only by providing the opportunity for regular hearing of the music which is good, and it is here that the Music Club plays an important part in the development of musical appreciation in the school. The Club has continued to meet every Sunday afternoon and the attendance has always been encouraging to the committee. Programmes have been extensive as it was decided to make them as attractive and varied as possible in an endeavour to make every boy in the school awake to the delights which music has for every one of us, no matter how different may be our tastes. Since July we have had monthly panatrophe recitals to which have been invited the Hermitage Music Club and music lovers of Geelong. The House of Music has been taxed to capacity at all these recitals at which have been played varied vocal and orchestral works, including American, Russian and English Music. To celebrate the 200th anniversary of Handel's Messiah, a full recording of this work was played in the Morrison Hall on Sunday, September 21.

The number of Junior boys among the members of the Music Club promises well for future development, and it is hoped that next year will see the fulfilment of many schemes which were found to be impractical this year, owing to difficulty in arranging a suitable time for our meetings.

Although the orchestra is still in the initial stages of its development, we have been fortunate in being able to "combine forces" with the stringed orchestra of our violin mistress Miss O. Foster. This has given boys who learn orchestral instruments the opportunity of performing good music and experiencing the thrill of playing in an orchestra. This work also develops "team spirit", one of the basic principles of our education, and the fact that we play with more advanced players than ourselves helps to improve the standard of our own work. Many Prep, boys have expressed their intention of learning wood-wind and brass instruments next year and this should encourage the formation of the projected Preparatory School Orchestra.

MIKADO PRINCIPALS.

By B. A. Broberg and Mr. J. H. Campbell.

DECEMBER, 1941.

The Senior choir, or "Male" choir has continued to learn four-part Glees and Anthems. Although this choir practises out of regular school hours and membership is purely voluntary, it is one of the most active bodies in our musical life. Membership has increased this term and a greater balance between the tenor and bass parts has been obtained. We sang several rousing four-part songs at the launching of the Geelong Y.W.C.A. Services appeal, but owing to the great amount of work that had to be done in preparation for the school's eightieth birthday celebrations and the "Mikado", we had to disappoint three societies which were anxious to obtain our services.

Reference is made elsewhere to our concert, representative of the various musical activities, which was presented in the Morrison Hall on the night of the "At Home", October 22.

To extend further the scope of our musical activities we have continued to arrange for recitals by visiting artists. These recitals enable us to experience the atmosphere of the concert room and to obtain a knowledge of singers and instrumentalists, and to carry that visual experience and mental stimulation into the Music Club or wherever we hear recorded music. We have had concerts from Mr. Bernard Manning, of Gilbert and Sullivan fame; William Herbert, tenor; Lucy Seeker, pianiste; the St. Augustine's Boys' Band, conducted by Mr. Percy Jones; Mr. A. Bendall, harpist; and Mr. L. Barklam, flautist.

The following boys were successful in the A.M.E.B. examinations conducted by the University.

Violin: R. M. Gillett (Grade IV) Hons., J. Davidson (Grade III) Hons., R. Purnell, J. Turner, D. R. McMillan (Grade VI) Hons.

Pianoforte: B. Thompson (Grade III) Hons., F. Elliot (Grade VI) Hons., G. Hardie (Grade IV) Credit, D. Hope (Grade V) Credit, I. Steele (Grade IV) Credit, J. R. T. Bryer (Grade II) Pass, G. Harding (Grade III Theory) Credit, R. L. Hill (Grade II Perception) Pass.

THE PEGASUS,

R. L. Hill has obtained from these Exams, two subjects towards his Leaving Certificate. J. Bryer and B. Thompson one subject towards their Intermediate Certificates and G. Reid one Intermediate Subject at the Lower Standard.

It will be seen from this brief review of the Musical activity of the last two terms that the main function of music in a school has been achieved; that of arousing in a boy a keen sense of appreciation of good music. This is proved by the high standard of the work done, and by the fact that so much of it is done voluntarily in out-of-school time.

The Carnegie Music Set.

SHORTLY before the last edition of "Pegasus" went to press, there arrived at the House of Music twelve heavy packing cases of various sizes, all bearing the label of a famous Chicago musical firm. The cry went up throughout the school, "The Carnegie Set's arrived", and soon the curious crowd, attracted to the House of Music by this news, was busily engaged in unpacking the contents of the cases which had been so long and so eagerly awaited.

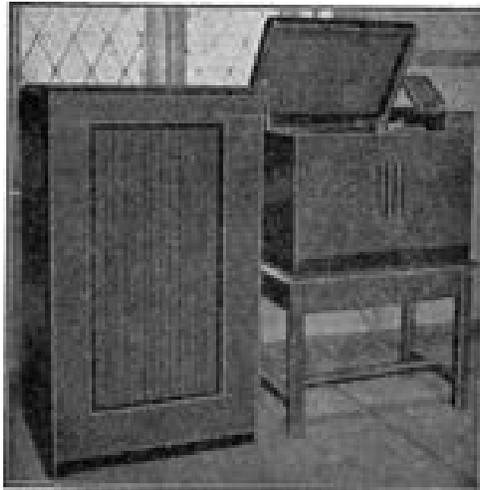

The feverish activity of an afternoon and an evening showed us the Carnegie Set as we now all know it. The sleek, luxurious polish of a modern sound reproducer unit, the dull gleam of mysterious fittings within a plain yet tasteful record player, the empty shelves of the record library, the compact, efficient looking filing cabinet, and, above all, pile upon pile of records. Records! There seemed thousands of them, and of all kinds. Strange new labels on the discs, neat folios in which each record had a place, names of artists, orchestras, composers of whom we had never heard, combined to give us a dizzy impression of magnificence. Most of the honest ones present will admit a feeling of exhilaration. Mr. Smith, without a doubt, was intoxicated.

Of course, since then the Carnegie Set has had to undergo sterner trials than those of the first night's admiration. It has come in for a great deal of work, and has revealed certain defects which, perhaps, only serve to make it more interesting, but generally speaking, it has proved of outstanding value to the school's musical education. The warmest tribute which could be paid to its utility is the eternal crowd which seeks to use the set in every spare moment, and the fact that very seldom is the House of Music free from the sound of one of the Carnegie records being played for the benefit of someone, who, before the advent of the Set, would never have dreamed of troubling himself for a little musical enjoyment.

True, for some time the most popular records in the all-embracing collection of 640 were the Hill-Billy, march and jazz, but this was a healthy beginning to a process of self introduction into the realms of really good music. It is an encouraging sight to see young boys who were recently uninterested in the works of music's masters, exploring for themselves the long catalogue of the world's finest music, played by the world's foremost artists. They are asking questions, too, about the composers, their style, the musical forms and so on, encouraged by the omnipresent Mr. Smith. That is no mean achievement, to have "converted", easily and pleasantly, so many of the boys who would normally have left school scarcely touched by good music.

The acquisition of all these records, along with the superb apparatus for playing them, gives us a library of about 900 discs, and the opportunity to hear any kind of music at almost any time. Some concern has been caused by the occasional damage suffered by the Carnegie records and apparatus in the course of their extensive use, and it seems likely that a system of stricter control will be introduced next year, but for the most part, good sense and care have been exercised by all who use the Set.

Not only has the College benefited by this bequest, but the public also has had several opportunities, in the form of a series of programme afternoons, of hearing what the far-sighted generosity of a great American Trust has given to one of the centres of Geelong's musical life. Attendances were almost too much for the House of Music on some occasions during these Sunday afternoon programmes, and it seems that there are very many Geelong people who will welcome the continuation of the series throughout next year.

Of the origin of all this excitement, joy and true beauty, much could be written. We should never have had such a musical feast had it not been for the Carnegie Corporation in America, and we can best point to the effects of the Set's arrival here as thanks to that organisation. It is being put to the service of a King amongst the arts, Music.

" The Mikado."

THE electrician made a last-minute check; BLUE! and the chorus looked at each other's faces and laughed; AMBER! and all the heat of a tropical sun flooded the stage. Rubber-shod shadows, officially scene-shifters, padding noiselessly along the catacomb-like back corridors. The "principals" adjusted their wigs and had another look in the mirror. A steady but indistinct murmur indicated the presence of the audience behind the heavy, red curtain. The violins in the orchestra pit made suggestive 5 to 8 noises. A hurried, scuffling sound under the stage announced the conductor was about to take his place.

A sudden hush; then the orchestra playing the familiar introduction. The chorus swallowed and began to look oriental. Then with a good-natured shrug the big red curtain lifted on "the Mikado".

To describe the opera to those who did not see it, is almost as difficult a task as representing the delight of those who did. Carried out in the true Gilbert and Sullivan tradition, there was that quality of freshness and originality about the whole show that distinguishes the amateur from the professional. The chorus performed faultlessly, and its enthusiasm and vigour gave to the performance an impression of strong and healthy reality. Some word should be said of the "principals" individually.

THE MIKADO (J. M. Ferguson). Full justice was done to this part—the most spectacular in the play, and the peculiar mixture of extreme authority and blood-thirsty playfulness was rendered with vigour and understanding. The Mikado's Song was possibly the most popular individual item in the show. The diabolical laugh (trying to imitate his "Yah-Hya-Yah, Hya! Eeeaaaoughaa!") has become a widespread and fascinating hobby) and his expression of disgust when his daughter-in-law-elect interrupts him will be remembered for some time.

NANKI-POOH (D. N. Fearon). The Great Lover—always a difficult part—was excellently portrayed with an appreciation of the special peculiarities of the character: the 'cavaliere servante' with a sense of dignity fitting to a royal heir. Especially good in the 'Wandering Minstrel' and the love scenes, beautiful singing was added to accomplished acting to give a very creditable performance.

YUM-YUM (D. Rogers). The difficulty of acting the female parts is rarely appreciated, and owing to the artless portrayal of this year's womenfolk, I fear will remain so. Oomph, until so recently an American ideal has been practically demonstrated to 2,500 people. Singing and acting beautifully, Yum-Yum's triumph lay in looking lovely. More people than Ko-Ko were envious of Nanki-Pooh.

KO-KO (F. G. Tait). Playing the fool has rarely been done as humourously: with some new "gag" every minute on the stage.

THE PEGASUS,

Ko-Ko kept the audience simmering with mirth. In the understanding of the character of the cheap tailor who had never even killed a blue-bottle and was suddenly raised to the exalted rank of Lord High Executioner lay the secret of his superb achievement. The fact that the character demanded an adopted "voice" added considerably to the difficulty of the part and to his triumph; and if any one character contributed more than another to the success of the production, it was Ko-Ko.

POOH-BAH (M. I. Souter). Great also was the achievement of Pooh Bah—monstrous and haughty. From a rather restricted part he extracted the maximum humour, and his side-splitting actions in sitting and standing were one of the high-lights of the evening.

KATISHA (J. Gillett). Endimanche in flaming scarlet robes, her grey hair frankly unsubmitive to a Japanese "bun", Katisha was a repulsive eye-sore. Full advantage was made of her awe-inspiring appearance, and the difficult singing part was performed with confidence and strength.

PEEP-BO (G. Hardie) and PETTI-SING (B. A. Broberg). These "two little maids" gave a delightful performance. The art of "flappery" was expounded in a fresh and original manner. Vivacious and folatre, their portrayal of the frivolous and ingenuous maidens was irreproachable: their most popular number was the "Three little maids from School".

PISH-TUSH (C. M. Williams). W. E. Watkins, who was to have done this part, unfortunately contracted influenza two days before the presentation—and Murray Williams learnt the part in those two days! But even if the audiences had not known at how short notice he had played the part, his performance would have been universally acclaimed. Acting with confidence and balance, and executing the most intricate of fan-movements, he soon made a favourable impression on the audience.

'Les bras croisses sur sa poitrine'—the brass crosses on his chest.

27

The Glee Club has had a busy year. "The Mikado" required more stage work than any of the operas we had previously attempted and a great deal of practice was required to perfect the many intricate fan movements which play such an important part in this production. However, a keen interest was maintained, and was stimulated by the visit of Mr. Bernard Manning to the school. We feel proud that Mr. Manning things enough of the Geelong College Glee Club to consider it worth while to come to Geelong and give us valuable advice. We in Geelong have become accustomed to travelling to Melbourne to see something there, and so we became fascinated with the idea of running a special "Mikado" train to bring people from Melbourne to Geelong, to see what could happen here. This plan more than justified itself and it was pleasing and encouraging that we had so many Melbourne patrons at our performance.

The last meeting of the Glee Club was held on Thursday, November 27 at the House of Music. We heard some excerpts from Opera, selected and annotated by Mr. J. H. Campbell, and then adjourned to the Dining Hall for supper. Presentations were made to Mr. Smith, who really is the Glee Club, and without whom it could not possibly exist; to Mrs. Carrington, who gives up so much time to play the part of accompaniste; to Mr. J. H. Campbell, who does all the little things that no one notices very much and who has the official title of Stage Manager; and to Mr. Webb, for without the co-operation of the House of Guilds a production like "The Mikado" would be impossible.

"Cottage Pie."

AS the climax to a vigorously conducted drive for war funds in the Cottage, an entertainment was staged in the Morrison Hall on the last Friday night of second term, by the members of the Cottage.

"Cottage Pie", as the show was aptly called, was a type of show never before seen in the College, being a kind of "non-stop revue", and the large audience clearly showed how much this change from the regular concert fare was appreciated.

Every member of Warrinn boarding house took part in the programme, which included a boys' ballet by the tougher elements in the Cottage, and the coronation of the Cottage Cave Man, the yodelling cowboy, "Tex" Reid. Other popular features were the sketches which were interspersed between the longer items, and one of which included Miss McOuat (Maggie) in her first stage appearance.

"The Man With the Cigar", a one act play, and a really fruity melodrama were other popular items, and the flute solo by Mr. Campbell and impersonations by Ginger Souter received hearty applause.

Only two members of the entire cast, namely Messrs. Smith and Roydhouse were not boarders of the Cottage, and even they had strong past associations with the house.

As it enabled them to present a substantial sum to the Red Cross and as well gave themselves and the rest of the school a great deal of fun, the Cottagers were well satisfied with this effort, which, by the way, they presented as "the Bally Hooligans".

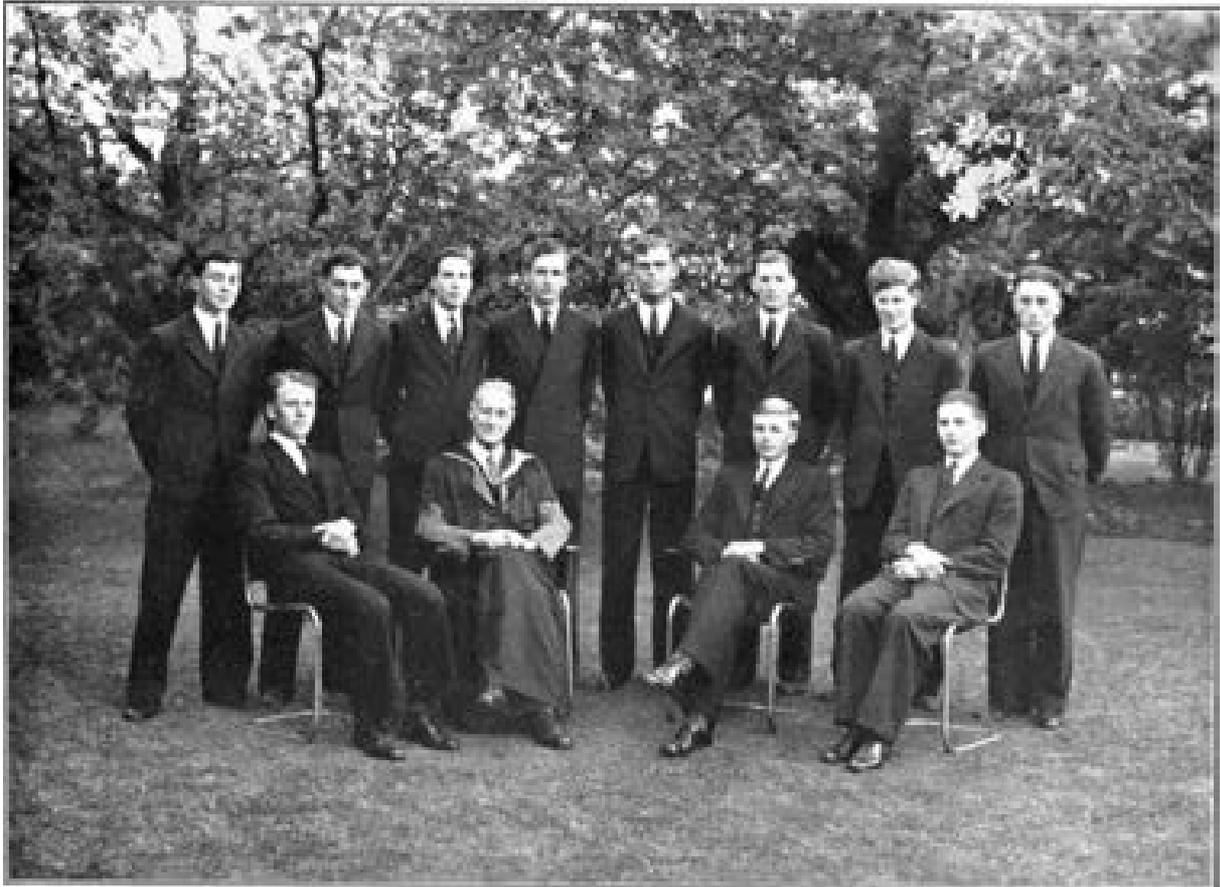

House of Guilds Notes.

JUST as the outstanding success of the musical activities in the College have typified the best ideas in modern education, so the continued progress of the House of Guilds is evidence of the soundness of the scheme for filling in a school-boy's leisure hours with creative, interesting work. As far as is possible all the work which formerly interested members is being maintained, though some guilds, notably the radio and leatherworkers, have suffered curtailment of supplies through the demands of war economy on materials essential to these activities.

PREFECTS.

Back: D. J. Roydhouse, R. L. Hill, F. G. Tait, R. H. Zimmerman, J. M. Ferguson,
R. J. K. Russell, M. I. Souter, J. A. C. McDonald.
Seated: J. H. Anderson, Rev. F. W. Rolland, F. H. Davey (senior prefect), C. M. Williams.

There has been a slight revival in the pottery work, but several improvements to the existing facilities will have to be made before any considerable increase in work can be expected. The small dark room has been painted throughout, and is again helping to accommodate the normally large number of photographers who comprise one of the most active of the guilds. Some ambitious jobs have been undertaken in the radio rooms, and a gratifying number of small boys has begun work in this interesting field by building crystal and simple valve sets.

Considerable interest has been shown by several boys in the recently expanded weaving apparatus. Numbers of finely woven and well designed scarves from the new hand loom will be seen adorning College necks when the cold weather sets in, and it may not be long before somebody will be wearing a sports coat of the material now being made on the big factory loom.

Possibly the most popular craft this year has been model aircraft construction, and some of the older hands are now turning out large and impressive planes, many of which have been known to fly. Members of this guild were recently moved into a larger room, while the model railway enthusiasts, including many Junior House boys, now occupy their former position in the loom room.

Except for the week-end picnics, little has been done in the way of hiking, but it is expected that hikes will be organised early next year again.

The usual activities of book-binding, leather work of all kinds and so forth have progressed well in the general crafts room, as a formidable number of stock-whips, belts and similar goods testifies.

Shortly before we went to press a new oxy-acetylene welding plant arrived at the House of Guilds for the use of the Model Engineers, who have felt the need for such a plant for some time, and should be able to employ it very profitably next term. A new gas ring has also been fitted in their room, and the existing equipment has been maintained in good order.

THE PEGASUS,

Small members of the House recently carried several buckets of vegetables, grown by them in small plots on the east side of the building, to the Geelong Hospital, and they are also growing herbs for the army. Meanwhile, the flower garden, though rather bare at the moment, has been prepared for a bright display at the commencement of the new term.

As before, the House of Guilds supplied many materials, and some of its members the work, for the making of properties for this year's Glee Club presentation, "the Mikado". These included a large number of fans, and armour, helmets and miscellaneous Japanese accoutrements.

The year has not been one of spectacular progress, but progress there has been, steady and solidly founded. What began as a rather risky experiment in spare time education, is now recognised as a valuable, indeed, essential part of the scheme of things in the College. It is reasonable to expect a steady progress throughout the next few years, so long as the membership is normally high, and war economy does not seriously affect the prices and supplies of materials upon which the House of Guilds depends for most of its craft work.

Cadet Notes.

THE problems of maintaining interest in the Cadet Corps are greater than ever because of the almost complete absence of modern equipment with which all the schools are faced. Only a small number of .303 rifles has been retained by us, and the Vickers and Lewis machine guns which were sometimes available for our training have now been sent to Melbourne, thus leaving us with a totally inadequate supply of modern rifles, numbers of unsatisfactory small single shot rifles and little else.

Not only have the regular infantry sections of the Corps suffered in this respect, but the specialists are also unable to obtain the equipment which is vital to their further training and development.

The annual camp at Bonegilla provided opportunities for the use, or at least the inspection, of some of the weapons which the modern soldier uses, and as full use as was possible was made of the equipment which was made available by the Officers Commanding various A.I.F. units in the neighbourhood. We at least saw, and some of us mounted, Bren Gun Carriers, and there was one particularly interesting display of bridge-building given by a unit of engineers who were stationed close to our own camp site.

Every boy in camp received a limited amount of instruction in anti-gas precautions, and few members of the corps have not now a fairly good idea of the powers of gas, and how to protect themselves against it. Then, too, we had the benefit of instruction from Sgt. Ian Hope, an Old Boy, who had leave from a militia camp to join us at Bonegilla. He initiated us into the mysteries of Army Intelligence, and gave much valuable assistance in map-reading and the use of prismatic compasses.

On the whole, this year's camp was a success from the point of view of what we learned, and few did not enjoy the spell of camp life, despite the curtailment of normal holidays.

After the Bonegilla camp, several boys attended camps at Seymour, some under the auspices of an Artillery Regiment, and others in the charge of a unit of Divisional Signals. Sickness deprived some boys of much of the benefit of these courses, but valuable experience was gained, and should prove useful to the Corps next year.

Later in third term, a party of fifteen, under the command of Lieut. Smith, travelled to the Puckapunyal camp to watch an artillery shoot. This provided an extremely interesting day, especially when the party climbed a steep hill to the observer's post whence they could see both the firing of the guns below, and the hits registered on distant targets.

Then, on Saturday, November 8, the entire corps travelled to Melbourne to take a small part in the Combined Cadet Corps display at the Caulfield Racecourse. To most of us the realisation of the size and scope of the cadet organisation in this State was something of a shock, and the parade promoted a feeling of greater solidarity with our kindred organisations. There was a more practical aspect to the day as well in the marching competition, the demonstration of field tactics, and the numerous other activities staged by different school corps.

Of late we have used Queen's Park as a scene for our own tactical exercises, and have introduced a certain amount of co-operation between the Intelligence section, the Signals Platoon and the main body of the corps. A fresh crop of prospective N.C.O.'s is being trained, and these, together with those of this year's N.C.O.'s who are returning, should give initial impetus to work next year.

The school was creditably represented by the corps at an open-air service in Johnstone's Park, on the occasion of the National Day of Prayer to which the Prime Minister called us on Sunday, November 16.

SONNET: TO PAIN . . .

You twist and wrench the body of mankind,
 You shoot sharp sudden pangs which cut and tear,
 You drive God-fearing men to blank despair,
 Distort the soul, torment the aching mind.
 You mar all beauty of the flesh; and grind
 And rip each limb until men shriek and swear,
 Or sobbing, yield the ghost with choking prayer
 That they might die, and leave all pain behind.

And yet, O Pain 'tis thou who hast revealed
 The love of God for weak unfaithful man,
 For His own Son, in His brief earthly span
 Was once possessed by thee, and did not yield,
 But underwent thy frightful torture, Pain,
 That what he lost, all other men might gain.

SLA VIA . . .

Earth should be silent, and the world be still
 While the crowd watches, open-mouthed with fear,
 The small, black figure toiling up the hill
 To stand against a bloodshot dawning sky,
 And wait the word.
 The people watch, a child begins to cry;
 The sad drums sound the news that death is near;
 The flag is followed up by sullen eyes, and then
 The shot is heard.
 A thousand peasant prayers
 Are murmured for the soul upon the hill,
 The soul of Jalic. As the belted men
 Descend the hill, you hear the savage hiss . . .
 The crowd falls silent, sullen, as the men dismiss.

WISE, WEST WIND . . .

I know you well, friendly old wind, how wise you are!

 the deepest of secrets:
 And yesterday I caught you turning the pages of a book . . .

FALLEN LEAVES . . .

brittle brown leaves blow across the pavement, and pile up against the old paling fence till they're scattered by a gust of cold wind and blown into the gutter, they've no aim, no meaning, no purpose, no direction . . .
 for they are dead . . . they are fallen leaves,
 but they have a story, these fallen leaves, and they sing the finale to their sad song
 as the wind scurries them across the road.

"Once we shone and sparkled with the morning dew,
 Catching the sun, reflecting it anew.
 An artist tried to imitate our green,
 But paint could not express our mystic sheen.
 We smiled and trembled in the summer breeze,
 Were called 'the shimm'ring mantle of the trees,
 The handiwork of God, who made us all . . .'
 But poets never said that we would fall,

THE PEGASUS,

Wither, die and blow along the street,
 And crumple under thoughtless human feet.
 And now we have no life, our beauty's gone.
 We're fallen leaves, dead, dull where once we shone."
 beauty fades, the swan sings its final song, what then? how the song of the fallen leaves comes persistently to my anxious mind . . .
 "the handiwork of God . . . dull . . . once we shone . . ."

will my last song be sung to that same tune, the sad melody of the fallen leaves . . . ?

I have seen sea creatures
Lie gasping on my shores
Filled with strange desires.
I have watched them grow
In a way i never knew.
I have seen one kind
That could counfound
The other beasts, a hand
Unknown seemed to guide
And soon man's seed
Inherited the world
And began to build
A way of living in the wild . . .

I am Everest
the first and the last
And i laugh . . .
so that man shall not see
My laughter,

OF THE EARTH . . .

A ploughshare splintering on hard grey stone, rusting scrap, here's a war and off it goes to another scrap, mankind must have it to kill his fellows, seething furnaces, red lurid glow, spitting molten metal,
earthen mould hissing, steaming, humming lathe, gleaming chips, chemists' evil, the charm's done.
quick to the breech and from the smoking maw . . .
screeching, whining, moaning destruction's song horribly mocks lonely tearful widows—back to the earth the good earth and its own.

 Uplifted to the skies.
 'Twas then I saw the beauty of the world
 With all its folds of happiness unfurled,
 And all the thoughts abide
 Away from me, that are not justified;
 To leave the good I gain from you, my guide.
 Dear angel! let us meet again
 My dreams must serve till then.

PUBLIC SCHOOL FOOTBALL.

Coach's Report:

Coach's Report:

It was a disappointing season. The team was one of the smallest the College has had for some years, and the players lacked the skill needed to bring success. However, in spite of defeats, practice was keen and the experience gained should be valuable next year.

To a light team, the wet conditions under which all the matches were played proved a decided handicap, as did the unfortunate number of injuries, Sutherland and McPhee being injured in the practice matches, and Charles and Woodburn during the course of the season.

Souter, captain, and Murdoch, vice-captain, led the side ably. Russell played consistently in the ruck, and Anderson was the best of the backs. Some of the younger players showed promise, but were not up to the standard of Public School football where consistency, pace and determination are required to win matches.

HOUSE FOOTBALL .

Morrison v. Warrinn, August 11.

Warrinn in the first quarter were kicking with the wind, and, controlling the play almost from the bounce, gained a substantial lead. However, in the second quarter, Morrison had the advantage and Warrinn scored only one behind: the scores at half-time being:

Morrison: 3 gls. 1 bhnd.

Warrinn: 5 gls. 7 bhnds.

Play during the third and fourth quarters rather favoured Morrison, but they were unable to make up Warrinn's initial advantage, and the final scores were:

Morrison: 7 gls. 3 bhnds. 45 pts.

Warrinn: 8 gls. 13 bhnds. 61 pts.

DECEMBER, 1941.

Calvert v. Shannon, August 13.

Calvert, on a quicker start, gained a first quarter lead in a hardly-contested match. In the second term, Shannon rallied, and, playing a steadier game, passed their opponent's score. Calvert, however, came into their own in the last half, and, despite determined play by Shannon, maintained a two-goal lead till the final bell.

Calvert: 7 gls. 8 bhnds. 50 pts.

Shannon: 5 gls. 5 bhnds. 35 pts.

Morrison v. Shannon, August 14.

During the first quarter, both teams fought strongly for an advantage, and, although Shannon had more scoring shots, the score was slightly in Morrison's favour. In the second and third quarters, this lead was increased, and, at three-quarter time, Morrison was leading by 28 points. Shannon challenged strongly in the last quarter, but were unable to make up the deficit.

Morrison: 9 gls. 16 bhnds. 70 pts.

Shannon: 5 gls. 8 bhnds. 38 pts.

Calvert v. Warrinn, August 18.

During the first quarter, each side scored only one point, but, during the second, Warrinn's defence weakened and Calvert gained a substantial lead. Warrinn rallied well in the third quarter, and succeeded in holding Calvert for some time, but, in the last term, they were again unable to cope with the Calvert attack, and the scores at the end of the match were:

Calvert: 11 gls. 11 bhnds. 77 pts.

Warrinn: 4 gls. 6 bhnds. 30 pts.

Calvert v. Morrison, August 20.

Calvert took charge of the game from the start, and, in the first quarter, gained more than half their total score. During the next two quarters, Morrison, by a much improved defence, limited Calvert's scoring-rate somewhat, but were unable to score themselves. In the final term, Morrison made a valiant attempt to catch up to their opponents, but were well held by Calvert.

Calvert: 11 gls. 12 bhnds. 78 pts.

Morrison: 2 gls. 5 bhnds. 17 pts.

THE PEGASUS,

Shannon v. Warrinn.

In this match Shannon were feeling the effects of two hard matches in succession and were unable to cope with the strong key-men of Warrinn.

Warrinn began well and scored two quick goals, but Shannon then broke through Warrinn's defences and scored four goals in succession. This gave Shannon a clear lead at the end of the first quarter.

Play until the end of the third quarter was then more even, and at three-quarter time Warrinn was leading by eight points.

In the last quarter, Warrinn succeeded in adding another four goals to their score, and although Shannon were attacking strongly, Warrinn's backline prevented them from scoring anything but a few points.

The final scores were 12 goals 14 behinds Warrinn defeated Shannon 8 goals 7 behinds.

Athletics.

A feature of this year's athletics was the number of records broken.

F. H. Davey, competing in the Open 120 Yards Hurdles at the Combined Sports, set a new standard for this event, in which the height of the hurdles was reduced to 3 ft. 3 ins. His time was 15 4-5th seconds. In the same event in the Championship Sports, Davey had already reduced the existing College record to 16 seconds.

G. T. Exell broke the Open College Weight Putt record at the Triangular Sports with a putt of 44 ft. 4¾ ins., and the Under 16 Weight Putt record was broken in the Championship Sports by A. W. Davies, putting a distance of 37 ft. 5¾ ins.

G. W. Ewan, in the Championship Sports, broke the Under 15 College High Jump record, clearing 5 ft. ¼ in. In the Triangular Sports he increased this to 5 ft. 1¾ ins., and jumping in the Under 16 section at the Combined Sports he cleared 5 ft. 6 ins.

Two College Interhouse Relay records were also broken by Calvert winning the Under 16, 660 Yards Relay in 1 minute 17 2-5th seconds, and Warrinn, the Under 15, 400 Yards Relay in 49 3-5th seconds.

G. K. Murdoch is to be congratulated on winning the College Cup. He won the 880 yards, the 440 yards, the 220 yards and the Broad Jump, and was second in the 120 yards Hurdles, the 100 yards and the Weight Putt.

Rowing Notes.

DURING first term, the training of the first VIII was facilitated by the untiring help of Messrs. J. H. Campbell, C. F. H. Ipsen, J. A. Carrington, R. Reid and A. N. Shannon. The crew and their coach deeply appreciate their assistance and wish to express their gratitude for their valuable service.

HOUSE ROWING.

This year great interest was taken in the House Rowing for it was not at all obvious, as it had been in other years, which crew would win. The oarsmen from the first and second eights were evenly distributed among the four houses and the result of the race was very uncertain. Friday, November 14, the day chosen for the race, was ideal for rowing, and the crews had no difficulty in lining up at the start. Shannon quickly took the lead, while Warrinn, rating lower came next, with Calvert just a little ahead of Morrison. Throughout the first quarter mile these positions were maintained, but in the middle distance Morrison, the lightest and least experienced crew, dropped back. Warrinn challenged Shannon near the finish, but by clever stroking this crew held its lead and won from Warrinn by 1½ lengths. Calvert was three-quarters of a length behind Warrinn, and Morrison 3 lengths behind Calvert.

The crews were:—Shannon: D. N. M. Fearon (stroke), J. A. Strickland (3), R. P. Charles (2), K. J. Stillman (bow), W. A. Martin (cox). Warrinn: J. M. Ferguson (stroke), J. A. C. McDonald (3), J. R. Morrison (2), J. H. Anderson (bow), J. C. Shuter (cox). Calvert: A. W. Davies (stroke), D. G. Hope Johnstone (3), D. L. T. Woolley (2), D. K. Russell (bow), J. S. Heitmann (cox). Morrison: G. A. McKinley (stroke), P. W. Grutzner (3), S. K. Pearson (2), R. J. Michael (bow), R. M. Johnson (cox).

Jeremiah was a profiteer. [Scripture.]

THE PEGASUS, REGATTA.

The Annual School Regatta was held on Saturday, November 15. Owing to the influenza epidemic, the small number of four-oared crews competing enabled the race to be run without heats.

Results:—

Winning Crews:—Junior Fours: A. J. Matthews, D. Macmillan, M. Alexander, D. Philp (stroke), P. Eaton (cox).

Senior Fours: M. A. Spittle, A. D. Beith, D. Rolland, J. W. Brumley (stroke), P. Eaton (cox).

Senior Eights: D. S. Vanrenen (stroke), K. J. Stillman, J. H. Anderson, J. A. McDonald, R. P. Charles, D. Woolley, R. H. Zimmerman, R. J. Michael, J. Shuter (cox).

We would like to thank Geelong Grammar School for the loan of several boats which enabled the House Rowing and Regatta to be rowed on equal terms.

Preparatory School Notes.

AS when one comes to write the weekly letter home, no matter how busy the week has been the tendency is always to say, "There is nothing special to report," so it is with the writer as he faces the task of writing another set of Notes. Our days seem very full and our nights very short, but of course most of our time is occupied with routine matters.

During the year there has been a steady increase in the membership roll until now it has more than 125 names, including those of the Kindergarten. Some of the new-comers are from The Far East, chiefly from the Federated Malay States and Shanghai, and we value the wider experience we are gaining as a result of their arrival.

Activities outside the class-room have centred round three main events: The "Open Day" in connection with the Birthday Celebrations, the "Mikado" and the Athletic Sports. The Preparatory School had made no special preparation for Open Day, as our services were required for guiding the visitors round the school. We thoroughly enjoyed ourselves pointing out to others those features of the school of which we are so proud. Not many visitors escaped before they had heard our full story.

Once again the Choir has had a most enjoyable and successful year. During second term a broadcast was given over 3GL, items were given at a function in connection with the Y.W.C.A. Services Appeal, and this term at the concert which was held in the evening of the Open Day. We feel that any success we have gained is due to the almost unbelievable patience and enthusiasm of Mr. Smith and we thank him very warmly for his work.

A number of boys worked very hard at the chorus work of the "Mikado" and felt rewarded for their efforts by the universal acclamation afforded the performance. At present rehearsals are in progress for a performance of "Aladdin" to be given on Speech Night.

The Athletic Sports were held under much more favourable weather conditions this year and attracted many visitors. Several records were broken, the outstanding performer being Morris who won the Prep. Championship. A full list of results is given below.

In other sports regular practices have been attended by all boys and some contests have been held. These contests have provided the maximum of enjoyment and we met with some success. The tennis court will very soon be completed, and very keen competition for its use is certain.

The end of the year is very close, bringing with it the closing of a stage in the life of those who next year will go to the Senior School. It is with real regret that we see them go, as the Prep, has been a happy group in a world where friendly co-operation is more valuable than "precious stones".

Eightieth Birthday Portrait.

THE Committee wishes to express its thanks to Old Collegians for the fact that, even in these days, the Eightieth Birthday Portrait Fund was soon fully subscribed.

Mr. Charles Wheeler, who executed the portrait of the late S. B. Hamilton-Calvert, now in the Morrison Hall, has been commissioned to proceed with the work; sittings began some weeks ago, and it is expected that the portrait will be ready for presentation to the College early in the New Year.

It is an outstanding tribute to Mr. Holland that the present boys were not to be left out of the scheme, and we have received a substantial sum in their name; the Association thanks them most sincerely for their co-operation.

Pegasus for the Forces.

THE suggestion has been made that many old boys would like specifically to "adopt" one or more of our fighting men as a recipient of "Pegasus". Up to date we have contrived to send "Pegasus" to all our men overseas, where we have their military addresses, with the help of a few general donations from members; but it is becoming an increasing burden on our resources as more and more men are enlisting and, in the case of members of the Association, we are, of course, losing their financial support. We cannot discontinue this service, for we know how much it is appreciated by the men.

Three shillings a year would pay for "Pegasus" for a sailor, a soldier, or an airman. If you would care to help in this way, the Secretary would be very glad to receive your contribution.

Letters from Old Boys on Service.

THE following extracts are typical of many letters we have seen from Collegians with the forces in all theatres of war, and are selected for their representative value as well as for their personal interest.

Gunner A. L. HASSETT writes from the Middle East: "Have just returned from an A.I.F. cricket tour to Egypt. We played five games, two practice matches in Palestine and three games in Egypt, and won all five outright. We were well fitted out with caps and blazers, which we were allowed to keep: I am sending mine home as a memento. The team really looked like an Australian eleven when they were on the field. The grounds were all beautiful, and you can just imagine how much I loved it after a Palestine summer. General Blarney was present at the games and I had several yarns with him. I feel inclined to look upon Colonels and below as small fry now, but I suppose a couple of weeks of ordinary routine will fix that up. . . . I was invited to dine with the officers in the wardroom of an English destroyer. It necessitated constituting myself a lieutenant for the time being, but this was easily accomplished by inserting a couple of pips in my shoulder-straps. I enjoyed the smart salute I received from the sailors as I boarded the ship, and also the hospitality, which was typical of the navy in its courtesy and efficiency. Be it enough to say that I steered the native craft back to the shore when we said good-night, and then drove the gharry back to the hotel, breaking all records and the driver's whip."

Lieut. F. H. DAVIDSON, in Syria, writes as follows:—"You would be surprised to know how well I have progressed with my French. Although I am in contact with the French a great deal, it is very rarely necessary to use an interpreter; so my College efforts were not in vain. Lately I have been staying with several of the better class Syrians. We converse in French sometimes, sometimes in English, and it proves excellent practice for both parties. . . . To-day I went to Damascus, that centuries-old city. Some of the original walls are still standing. We drove around the old wall and halted under the window whence St. Paul is believed to have been lowered in a basket."

L/Cpl. A. B. SIMSON, Rabaul—"Sleeping at night in the long grass provided plenty of scope for studying local insect life, after coping successfully with the thousands of frogs, and making certain the net was not within range of falling coconuts. I think every "nit" in the island crawled over or chewed part of my anatomy. We fed on fish dynamited by the natives, tried spearing, and crawled round the coral reefs. . . . On Tuesday night Hope Kaufmann and I visited the plantation owner, Mr. Alan S. Green, only to find he lived in Claremont Avenue, Newtown, was an Old Collegian, having left in 1901, and was a cousin of "Lofty's" boss. Mrs. Green was also a Geelong girl, so we had plenty to talk about, besides finding the world a small place. Mr. Green made a special trip to Geelong in 1936, the year College won the Head of the River."

Pilot-Officer E. R. ROBERTS, somewhere in Canada—"Our last port of call being American territory, made it impossible for us to go ashore. However a party of native girls performed a hula dance on the pier. This was uproariously acclaimed by all on board and we insisted on encore after encore. . . . Very soon we had our noses to the grindstone, and eventually the day dawned to which we had been looking forward for about eight months—Wings Parade. We were proud of the fact that our whole course received their wings, even one of the lads who had had to make a forced landing one day after he had been up on a height test and had underestimated the wind. He landed to find out where he was, and when a woman asked him where he came from, he replied "Australia!", whereupon she nearly dropped, thinking probably that he had come direct . . . It seemed no time before we were welcoming in a new course behind us. These were Australians too, and included among them were Dave Shannon and Doug. Jenkins."

In one of his letters HARRY WINSTANLEY (now Pilot Officer) spoke of ELIOT BARNFATHER'S bombing and gunnery chart which was hanging in his school in Canada as an unbeaten record of accuracy. Later he wrote: "I don't know how well I'll do when the marks come out. At the oral and written exams. I expect to be O.K., but my practical work is very erratic. At gunnery I had the best score on the ground and one of the worst in the air. I had one bombing exercise which caused quite a stir, and my chart now keeps Eliot Barnfather's company in the main corridor. My average error was half a yard less than his, but his was a harder exercise, and carried out from 500 feet higher, so it still hangs. Naturally I got a great kick out of that performance."

Capt. C. FALLAW has spent some time in Malaya: "We found ourselves deposited in a rubber plantation dank with the rain of ages and the fallen rubber leaves of 30 years. Mud and rain were the order of the day. We carted 300 tons of stone and dumped it on the road, and it was just beginning to appear above the surface of the mud. By the time we had more or less settled in there it was time to move on a mile or two, lock, stock and barrel. We are now much better situated in the open. It is much drier. Privacy is somewhat lacking in the officers' area. On one side we have the road and the railway, and on the other side about 50 yards away the local hospital rises on a knoll above us. The verandah of the hospital is a very crowded spot around about officers' shower time."

Sgt. RAMSAY COOK tells of mixed experiences in Palestine: "I was glad to receive the "Pegasus" some days ago, and I must apologise for not making some acknowledgment of the fact that I received a prior copy. It does mean a great deal to get the magazine out here. Things are green and the plough will be put to the land shortly. We landed to oranges, and since then have had grape fruit, fleas, sand flies, water melon scorpions, snakes, centipedes, grapes, wasps and flies, flies and flies. It's a long life and a merry one and we have been in action against the Jerry and the Froggie and the Free French cove who flies a Glen Martin but unfortunately speaks German over his microphones. . . . As I look out I see a herd of oxen, whose reputation is low here, making towards our buildings, so a half-hour discussion is about to start with an Arab who speaks Arabic neither as I understand it nor as it is taught in the book we are issued."

Sgt. TOM HAWKES describes conditions in an Italian prisoner-of-war camp: "It reminds me of Coburg here, only naturally as Coburg is in Australia, I'd sooner be there. Got a very good issue of clothes from the Italians; they're certainly treating us very well A Red Cross parcel each this week; we get 50 cigarettes with them also, which is all important; the Red Cross is a marvellous organisation, stands on its own. English mail has been arriving for the Tommies fairly frequently for some time and it makes me very homesick—still I expect my time will come soon. The Pope is broadcasting a message to Australia from each one of us; one of the Aussies here got a cable from his mother after the last one I've great plans for all the things I'm going to do when I get back. Am still very fit and well and there is no need to worry at all. Hope you remember to tell me about the Boat Race."

Lieut. J. W. K. CHAMP, son of C. A. Champ (1899), is in an officers' prison camp in Germany. "This camp has lots of fresh water and we have a hot shower every week. Food is reasonable and we get lemonade and milk every day, and occasionally a bottle of lager beer. Have a concert every Saturday, and we Australians are putting on a show next week. We are playing a cricket match against N.Z. to-morrow and should win. The boys are all well and Jack Paterson (J. B. Paterson, O.G.C., 1919—Ed.) sends his regards. Hope to see England when the show is over."

Lieut.-Col. J. D. ROGERS has developed archaeological interest in the Middle East. "We stopped at a coastal village called Jbail, the ancient city of Byblos. Tarsus, Byblos, Tyre and Sidon were the four ancient ports of the Phoenicians. Some of the ruins at Byblos date back to about 2000 B.C. There are even some bones and pottery which belong to the Neolithic age. Then there are lots of evidence of the Roman and Greek occupation, amphitheatre churches, etc. The buildings must have been amazing ones made of huge limestone blocks (local) and pillars of granite from Egypt. The big church was pulled down by the Crusaders who made a rough kind of fort out of it. I collected a few very old Greek coins which I shall send on On the way up the mountain you pass through a rather pretty village called Ehden, which is supposed to be the site of the Garden of Eden—but there are several other claimants for that honour."

The Ormond Letter.

Dear Collegians,

The Academic year has almost finished. Even more so than in first term, the War is exerting a disruptive influence on University and College life. Instead of a long vacation, most students will be in camp over the normal break, and work will commence earlier in some Faculties.

Early in the term were held the first final medical examinations for the shortened course at which Jack Simpson qualified; he is now on the staff of the Launceston hospital. Another Old Collegian to leave during the term was Joe Aitken, who is in the R.A.A.F. Perhaps because the social functions of the Play and the Ormond Ball have been dropped, common room dances have been more popular during this year.

After a few weeks' training, the Ormond team was able to win the football. In what was a very close and exciting match, Ormond defeated Newman by 3 points, kicking the winning goal a few minutes before the bell. The final against Queen's was an anticlimax. Among the side were Dave Watson, Neil Sutherland, Bill MacGregor, George Barrett and Alan Tait. "Doc" Hicks, now out of College, aided in the training. Ormond were successful in the tennis, Bill Doig being a member of our team.

The large number of Old Collegians who arrived as freshmen this year was most welcome, and we look forward to more next year. To past and present Collegians, Ormond sends best wishes for Christmas and the New Year.

OBITUARY.

William James Dennis of "Uondo", Warncoort, was the fourth son of Alexander and Jessie Dennis and was born at Eyeuk near Terang in 1877. He was educated at Toorak College and later at Geelong College. On leaving College in 1893 he entered on Pastoral work, gaining much practical experience in sheep-breeding and management under his cousin Herbert H. Wettenhall on Carr's Plains Station in the Wimmera. From there he came to manage Tarndwarncoort Station jointly with his cousin Allan Wettenhall in 1902 for the firm of Dennis and Wettenhall. Continuing to manage for R. V. Dennis when the lease was up, he married in 1910 the eldest daughter at Tarndwarncoort, Catherine Vernona, and resided at the home "Uondo". Having bought out the interest in the property of relatives resident in England, Jim as he was known to many, carried on the management of the "Uondo" portion of the old estate when it was further subdivided between Richard Dennis's family. At a later date a considerable portion, including the homestead, of the neighbouring Bleak House property was added. He was a successful pastoralist and his shrewd judgment in sheep-breeding lifted the "Uondo" flock of Polwarth sheep to a high level of merit, his teams of stud sheep meeting with considerable success at Melbourne and other sheep shows.

While keenly interested in most outdoor sports, Jim excelled particularly with gun and service rifle. He was champion shot of Geelong College and during his term as Captain of the Birregurra Rifle Club, on one occasion led his team to victory in a Corangamite Shield final with a valuable possible score at the last range. Of a quiet and somewhat retiring disposition, Jim had a gift for making firm decisions and he took a full share in any community enterprise of which he approved, being for many years a valued committee man of the Colac District P. & A. Society and a member of the Birregurra Presbyterian Church Session, and latterly a member of Geelong College Council. Careful in charity as in business, where he saw merit he gave liberally to public or private cause, and few will know the full extent of his kindly helpfulness.

In his last year his bodily strength failed more rapidly than his friends expected and shortly after seeing his second son Donald leave for A.I.F. service abroad, Jim passed away at his home on August 21, 1941.

C. J. Burns (1911) was killed in a traffic accident at North Geelong on July 31. His first employment was in the banking service, but he changed over to stock and station agency with Burns & Sparrow, and later entered his father's business, J. J. Burns & Co. About six months before his death he relinquished his interest in this business and joined the staff of the Ford Motor Co.

D. V. Jenkins (1933) was killed in an aircraft accident in England on August 14. He was College Swimming Champion and a member of the athletic team in his last year at school. On leaving he took up pharmaceutical chemistry and joined the R.A.A.F. last year.

T. H. Kelsall (1937) died on service in an aircraft accident in Rhodesia on July 8. He was a versatile athlete at school, his trophies including the senior swimming, boxing and dancing prizes. He was a prefect 1936-7; Captain of

THE PEGASUS,

Warrinn House; a member of the Crew 1936-7 (Honour Award 1936); the football team 1935-6-7 (Honour Award 1936); the Athletic team 1936 (Honour Award); and a Lieutenant in the Cadet Corps. Prior to his enlistment with the R.A.A.F. he was engaged in pastoral pursuits on his father's property, "Broughton Brook", Wagga, N.S.W. He was injured in a former aircraft accident last February, but following an operation was passed for further service, and was showing special promise as an aviator; he had reached the rank of Acting Sergeant-Pilot and had been recommended for a commission.

J. E. Price (1928) was the son of another Old Collegian, S. E. Price. On leaving the College he studied wool and entered the employment of the Federal Woollen Mill at Geelong. His real interest, however, was in flying. He qualified under the guidance of Mr. C. D. Pratt of Geelong, and acquired his own machine, with which he undertook commercial aviation in various parts of Australia. He then received appointments as civil aviation instructor in Western Australia and later in New Zealand. He was flying in England when the War started, but was declined by the R.A.F. for lack of residential qualifications; he went to Canada and became engaged in ferrying planes across the Atlantic. His brilliant aeronautical career came to an untimely end when a trans-oceanic plane crashed in England on August 10.

Leo. Young, the son of an Old Collegian, Samuel Young, came from Beaufort to the College in 1929, and remained to complete the Leaving Honours year in 1933. He was an enthusiast, always ready to work hard to test his ideas, and showed remarkable versatility. Though perhaps outstanding in athletics and tennis, he was a member of the XVIII and the XI, an officer in the O.T.C., a leading actor in school plays, a member of the "Pegasus" committee, winner of a debating prize, captain of Morrison House, and a prefect. He played in the tennis team for three years and was awarded School Colours for athletics, establishing an open long jump record of 20 ft. 11½ ins. which he still shares. At Ormond College he began a promising Law course, but did not neglect the social side of University life; he knew an amazing number of people, took a prominent part in athletics, tennis, drama, edited the "Ormond Chronicle", wrote the Ormond Letter to the "Pegasus". In 1936 he became deeply interested in the de Basil Russian Ballet and took small parts in productions; he was considered successful and encouraged to continue. This led to a world tour which was not wasted on his observant mind, and gave opportunities for the study of French and Spanish. Early in the war he was in Holland, and the account of his narrow escape at the time of the German invasion was featured in this magazine a year ago. Leo then joined the R.A.F., but was later invalided out on account of illness caused by exposure; he died on November 22 this year at the age of 27 years.

We record affectionately the passing of the Rev. Jas. Forrest, from 1906 to 1919 minister of St. George's and Chaplain of the College, who died recently. Hundreds of Old Boys remember his broad, manly outlook on life, his sly good humour, his happy gift of saying the right word at the right time. Our one regret must be that his son, the Rev. J. Fairlie Forrest (O.G.C. 1919), who followed his example as an army chaplain, is a prisoner of war, as noted elsewhere in these pages.

We extend our sympathy to Donald A. Ingpen (1929) on the death of his beloved wife. _____

WHAT you do in the next six months may or may not be headline news in a metropolitan journal, but in any case your old schoolmates will be glad to learn of it. Please write a note to the Secretary or Editor. With regard to enlistments particularly we want the latest and most accurate information.

The number of new Life Members of the O.G.C.A. in 1940-41 was twenty-four, the highest yet recorded in any year. Our progress score in the first half of this year is greater than that in the same part of last year. Can we hold this lead, and break last year's record?_____.

Our South Australian representative R. E. Jacobs was pleased to receive a visit recently from N. L. Gordon R.A.A.F., who was at a training base in that state. He has generously expressed his willingness at any time to see Old Collegians in the services who may be in Adelaide and perhaps at a loose end. They could make contact at his business address, 131 Grenfell St. (phone Cent. 6569) or at his home (phone U2201).

The Rev. J. Fairlie Forrest, who was Senior Presbyterian Chaplain in the Middle East, was wounded during fighting in Greece and taken to hospital, being still there when the Germans captured hospital, patients and staff. Since then Mrs. Forrest has had several letters reporting Fairlie well again, except for a limp, reasonably contented and well treated. He is full of praise for our doctors and says the German guards have been helpful. News, especially news from home, is the chief need of the captured men; unfortunately under present postal arrangements magazines like the "Pegasus" cannot reach prisoners of war.

Lieut W. P. Carr, with the A.I.F. in the tropics, suffering recently from a very unpleasant spell of malaria and dengue fever, had a surprise visit from Sgt. W. Wishart A.M.C. Sgt. Bill, hearing from home of Lieut. Carr's troubles, made a long trip to cheer him up, apparently with full success, for that officer is now making a good recovery.

Congratulations to Leading Seaman Loris Solomon, who was reported "missing, believed killed" following an engagement in the Mediterranean, but has since returned to Victoria to tell his exciting story. The motor boat in which he was rescuing survivors overturned; he was seen to reach an empty lifeboat, but could not be rescued. After three days he drifted to a small island; a week later he was taken off by a boat load of escapees from Crete, and the party drifted for ten days until picked up by a British patrol boat.

Lieut. C. D. Madden has been appointed as a diarist to the Military History and Information Section of the Army. Before the war he left the staff of the "Geelong Advertiser" and made a world tour; he was for some time engaged in work for various London papers. On returning to Australia he enlisted and went overseas with the A.I.F., seeing service in Palestine and Syria.

Our President, F. E. Moreton, has been elected President of the Council of the Gordon Institute of Technology, Geelong. He succeeds the late J. P. McCabe Doyle, whose two sons, John and Desmond, are Old Collegians.

S. E. Price has been appointed an honorary life governor of the Geelong and District Hospital as nominee of the Federal Mills contributory unit.

J. W. Carr is a newly-elected Commissioner of the Geelong Waterworks and Sewerage Trust. Two of his three opponents in the election were also Old Collegians, A. L. Backwell and F. E. Richardson.

Harold Anderson is now a trustee of the Geelong and District Nursing Society.

Theodore Fink, Chairman of Directors of the Herald and Weekly Times Ltd., has resigned the Chairmanship of the Australian Section of the Empire Press Union.

S. P. Wilson (1867) has sent in a list of scholars who attended the College in his day, and whose names do not appear in the College History and Register of 1910. This will be invaluable in compiling any future register, and it is sincerely hoped that other old Old Boys will follow Mr. Wilson's excellent example and let us have any information or documents relating to the early days.

A. G. Maclean has temporarily forsaken the Harbour City and is to be found C/o. Hannstrup & Co., Temple Court, Collins St., Melbourne. Claude Willmott, another of our prominent Sydneysiders, has had word that his son Ronald (who was adjutant of the 2/1st Battn.) is a prisoner of war in Germany.

A. R. Goller, of the staff of the National Bank of Australasia, is now stationed at Ayr, Q.

J. D. H. Cook is engaged on mapping work with the Lands Department in Melbourne.

A. E. McDonald has been elected a Vice-President of the Law Institute of Victoria. He is the first practitioner from outside Melbourne to have held this office.

J. E. Don now holds the office of Public Trustee of Victoria.

A. L. Backwell has been sworn in as a Justice of the Peace.

Keith Daniels has been transferred to the Footscray branch of the State Savings Bank of Victoria.

J. B. McLarty has passed his final accountancy examination, the last subject of which he did while in camp at Mt. Martha, before going abroad with the A.I.F.

J. G. Lamb has been promoted to the buying staff of J. G. Coles & Co. Ltd. and has removed to Melbourne.

W. M. Oliver has left the Shire of Lexton to take up the position of Secretary of the Shire of Kowree. The Shire Office is at Edenhope.

J. H. Davidson has been advised of his transfer to Melbourne and will move early in the New Year.
