2 The Morrisons' College

- 1 Annual Reports.
 2 Geelong Advertiser, 12 December 1875; 12 December 1874. At Melbourne Grammar, boarders died during two scarlet fever outbreaks in the 1860s, and of measles in 1880, while enrolments suffered during the worst typhoid epidemics in Melbourne during 1874–79 and 1882–83. See Weston Bate and Helen Penrose, Challenging Traditions: A History of Melbourne Grammar, 2002, p. 36.
 3 There were no deaths at Geelong Grammar, but enrolments took some time to recover. See Weston Bate, Light Blue Down Under: The History of Geelong Grammar School, p. 36.
 4 Mishura Collegians' Database. This evidence refutes Margaret Kiddle's assertion that Geelong Grammar was 'the recognised school' for the sons of Scots Presbyterians 'even after Geelong College was established'. She cited as evidence healthy enrolment figures at Geelong Grammar of 127 in 1873, but the College's enrolment numbers at that time were comparable. This was unusual, given that the College had recently been valued in excess of £17,000, but was perhaps understandable in the wartime climate of uncertainty. Twenty-four guarantors put up £10 each to satisfy the Presbyterian Church Board of Finance's request.

10 A kingdom of ideas

- 1 Interview with Libby Russell. Several of his earliest talks, speeches and articles were collected together and reproduced in 1979 as 'The Principal's papers'. In 1981, 'A Gallimaufry for staff' included some previous key addresses to staff, and other notes on his expectations of teachers about punctuality, imagination, planning and staff-student relationships. Both are in College Archives.

Helen Penrose (HistorySmiths Pty Ltd) is a professional historian. She has a Master's Degree in History from the University of Melbourne, where she is also an Honorary Research Fellow, and is a member of the Professional Historians Association (Vic) Inc. Her diverse list of published commissioned histories includes topics such as the suburb of Brunswick, the western suburbs of Melbourne during World War II, Werribee Sewage Farm, Box Hill Hospital, Spotswood Primary School, Maddocks lawyers, and independent schools including Xavier College–Kostka Hall, Melbourne Grammar, Caulfield Grammar and Firbank Grammar.

Commissioned by The Geelong College Council, this history celebrates 150 years of education at the College in 2011. It aims to understand the College's foundation and development within the wider context of education in Victoria, as well as to acknowledge intrinsic ties to the Presbyterian Church, the city of Geelong and the community of the Western District. By design a relatively concise history, the book has been conceived to complement extensive biographical and statistical details of College life and its people, to be found in the College's online Geelong College Illustrated Heritage Guide at www.geelongcollege.vic.edu.au. Expertly blending official and personal records, oral histories and a sumptuous array of maps, photographs and illustrations, this book will interest former students as well as those seeking to understand the College's place in Victoria's educational history.
